

Forum blasts tenure

"Tenure is like a carrot you hold out in front of somebody's nose until he forgets both why he was keeping his mouth shut and what he was going to say," stated Carl Jensen at a forum on tenure Wednesday noon.

Jensen, a philosophy department alumnus, was speaking before a capacity crowd in SUB Theatre on the issues of tenure in general and philosophy prof Ted Kemp's tenure in particular.

Other speakers on the panel were Mr. Kemp himself, and Richard Price, moderator.

"Universities are status quo institutions," said Mr. Jensen. He added that "one of the rules is to never speak out on things that affect you directly. How many of your professors ever speak in class about issues that involve the world we live in?"

Jensen went on to list germ warfare, pollution, racism, city problems and transportation as some of the topics professors seldom discuss on a grass-roots basis.

"When Ted Kemp takes an activist approach," said Mr. Jensen, "he becomes known as a 'popularizer' in the department because he gets more students out to his classes voluntarily than other professors in the department do. The department feeling is that the better teacher you are, the less students will want to have you as a teacher."

"I feel I can claim that I am very much concerned that students can come to 'own' their own education," said Mr. Kemp. "I've worked toward making students more responsible, however I've failed in as many cases as I've succeeded."

"I think they (the philosophy department) hired me because I had a good background in teaching at all levels," said Mr. Kemp. "I also was to oversee graduate teaching assistants in large classes. I don't have that job any more."

"When I was hired (1964), I promised I'd get a Ph.D. in a couple of years; I don't think that I've been denied tenure for breaking a promise—but rather, that promise."

Mr. Kemp said that when he joined the philosophy department staff he had two things to take into consideration: forwarding his career which meant not speaking out on issues, or teaching.

"I wish I had decided then to single-mindedly work on my teaching," he said. "I would have been a better teacher. I've recently decided that it's teaching I'm best at and want to do."

"I am a popular teacher because in my 18 years of teaching experience I've found that most students want to be taught," he said. "I do a lot of research, and in fact I practice my subject; I read, act and teach." Mr. Kemp teaches the philosophy of art.

When asked by a member of the audience if he thought there was anything students could do to help him keep his job, Mr. Kemp said, "I've been encouraged by the reaction of students, and students have been trying to get parity on my appeals board."

He went on to say "that whatever action is to be taken must be designed and carried out by the students."

About 50 students meeting in the graduate lounge on the 14th floor of the Tory Building to discuss further action decided to organize a rally in front of the Administration Building at noon Friday.

Items to be discussed at the rally are tenure, law and order, and education.

Student opinion unclear on marijuana issue

But other referenda pass by a wide margin

By Ellen Nygaard

Students on this campus are overwhelmingly in favor of lowering the drinking age, but they're not so sure about the merits of marijuana.

A total of 3,483 ballots were cast in Wednesday's referendum, polling student opinion on the lowering of voting and drinking ages, the legalization of marijuana, and the abolition of the tenure system in favor of contract-hiring of academic staff.

Strongest support was evident for the lowering of both drinking and voting ages to 18. The voting age ballot showed 2,734 in favor of lowering, 722 opposed; 2,734 voted for lowering the drinking age, 713 against.

The question of legalization of marijuana, however, appears to be anything but clear in the minds of the student body. A narrow majority of 136 were in favor of legalization, with 1,766 in favor, 1,630 opposed, and 92 abstentions or unmarked ballots.

Those polling stations recording rejection of legalization were Medical Sciences, Clinical Sciences, Nursing, Engineering, Lister Hall, and College St. Jean. All polls, however, recorded thin margins on this vote.

The last two parts of the referendum ballot dealt with the tenure system. Students voted 2,156 for, 1,151 against rejecting the tenure system. As for replacing the existing system with a contract-hiring system, 2,881 were in favor, 394 opposed.

When the results were finalized, a very weary returning officer, Derek Bulmer, said that while results on the drinking and voting age referenda were significant, the pot question indicated no definite direction of student opinion.

Regarding the votes on the tenure system, Mr. Bulmer said "those statistics wouldn't hold water."

The wording of the questions should have eliminated, but did not eliminate, some combinations of answers (such as voting in favor of both retaining tenure and instituting hiring by contract), he explained. Mr. Bulmer felt that some students were insufficiently educated on the subject and probably based their opinions on the isolated case of Ted Kemp.

FLQ members mistreated — Ombudsman

MONTREAL (CUP) —Four members of the Front de Liberation Quebecois convicted on charges of terrorism arising out of 1966 bombing incidents have been improperly treated by Quebec justice authorities, according to a report of the Quebec ombudsman, Louis Marceau.

Marceau was asked to investigate various aspects of the treatment of FLQ members by the "Comite d'Aide Vallieres-Gagnon," formed to help Pierre Vallieres and Charles Gagnon, accused of leading terrorist raids in Montreal in 1966.

Supporters charge they are solely political prisoners, innocent of any real crime but persecuted for the avowed separatism.

In a letter dated January 13, Marceau assured that:

•Four convicted FLQ members—Marcel Faulkner, Gerard Laquerre, Claude Simard and Serge Demers—will no longer be held incommunicado in jail, as they were during the trial of Charles Gagnon.

•The frequently-delayed trial of Serge Demers, accused of perjury in connection with the Vallieres-Gagnon trials, will take place during the next court session, beginning in March.

•The Quebec government will withdraw objections to the federal government granting parole to Faulkner, Laquerre and Simard.

Marceau also assured members of the committee that the conditions of Vallieres' imprisonment will be improved.

POT PASSES
(barely)

It took a while to scrape it up but man made good his folly

The world is on its way to redemption and faith in humanity has been restored, at least for the U of A Ski Club. Last week they received an anonymous letter containing $50 in cash and a short note explaining the gift.

The sender said he hoped it would help pay for some of the damage incurred at the club's dance last November at the Exhibition Grounds. The club was charged $197 for the damage.

The letter in part says, "I fully realize your position, my responsibility, and my basis for self-respect, so therefore I hope that this approximates my share of the damage. Sorry for the delay, but it took a while to scrape up the money."

Humanity can't be all that bad, can it?

Who Truly marks his passing?

Those only who recognize as he, one identity

Not those who through fear, greed and insecurity

Bury themselves in a multitude of status

The walking dead mourn only their kind

If mourn at all

Politicians, Kings and Queens

At best harlots of gas and wind

Carry more weight with most

Than those beings voice filled and Courageous with Humanity.

Student occupation ended at U of O by police raid

OTTAWA (CUP)—An early morning raid by city police Monday ended a brief occupation of a suite of offices in the University of Ottawa administration building by a group of French-speaking social science students demanding French-only instruction in their faculty.

The 18 students were charged with petty trespassing for their action, which began late Sunday.

Although the students were threatened with expulsion and suspension by U of O security staff during the occupation, a spokesman for the administration vice-rector's office said Monday none of the 18 would be dismissed or suspended by the university.

The students, released on their own recognizance, were to appear in provincial criminal court Monday afternoon.

The occupation was the latest in a campaign by U of O social science students to gain all-French instruction in the 350 member faculty, which is about 85 per cent francophone.

A referendum in the department turned thumbs down on the institution's bilingualism policy January 22. Although none of the four optional policies on language of instruction open to voters received a clear majority only 13 per cent of student voters favored retention of the current bilingual instruction, while 34 per cent voted for French unilingualism.

Despite the vote, the social sciences faculty council last week refused a demand by the Social Science Students' Union for a special meeting on the question, and the administration remained committed to its current form of bilingualism.

The student council at the U of O remained committed to changes, with many students complaining that the current bilingualism policy often gave priority to English in the social sciences faculty.

In one department students said, all but two of the 25 courses are offered in English only.

Students taking part in Sunday's occupation said they were "quietly taking over the offices of the teaching staff in an attempt to draw attention to the language conflict in the faculty."

They also gave assurance they would "avoid the unfortunate excesses that have marred other protest activities" and would damage no property.

"I LIKE POLLUTION." "I'll live for another fifty years." "I don't need to think about it; you are crazy." The above were some of the reactions to the street theatre action performed Wednesday on Jasper Avenue. A sheet was handed out which stated a few facts about pollution in Edmonton. There was also a letter which could be directed to the respective MLA's demanding to know what is being done and what can the individual citizen do. The theatre consisted of attempted lovemaking with the masks, walking, and subsequently dropping to the ground when without masks and generally pointing out what life would be like in 15 years with a breathing apparatus on every head.

STAFF THIS ISSUE—It was an anticlimactic night in the ol' office tonight. Yours truly, the pot-loving phallus symbol, had just dragged out and dusted off the old hookah in anticipation of legalization, when some spoil sport floated in and destroyed my fondest dreams—no legislation, no pot. Those joining in the ensuing misery were Ginny Bax, the stubborn, stubborn woman on the desk who wants to put the flag on the bottom of Page 1, Joe Chi who is getting a persecution complex, Darrell Colyer, Bob Blair, Bob Anderson, Elsie Ross, Heather Colyer, Ron Ternoway, Dorothy Constable, Ellen Nygaard, teeming hordes who milled about doing nothing, Beth Winteringham, Barry Nicholson who didn't do anything but he always gets in here someplace, and this old snake, who's going someplace to get stoned. What do U know?

by Al Scarth

One can work up a certain amount of sympathy for the predicament in which the government must now be finding itself in its search after a name for the province's fourth university.

After all, they can't name it The University of Northern Alberta for fear of offending the good folks in places like Grande Prairie. And they can't name it The University of St. Albert because it is a secular university, not a religious one. Nor can they name it Father Lacombe University without risk of injuring feelings in the town which carries that pioneer's namesake.

Sturgeon University after the roaring creek that tumbles past beautiful downtown St. Albert could be another possibility but there is no precedent. No one had the gall to name the university at Calgary, Bow U or Elbow U, and certainly no one dared call the one at Lethbridge, Old Man University. What would that have done to the government's youth image?

Certainly the name University of Edmonton has been barely whispered. What with the Klondike up in arms, why take another risk in exposing the city for the thief it is.

But there are still several other possibilities. In the miscellaneous famous names category, the possibilities are almost endless: Jon Bordo Memorial University, Major Hooper's Boarding House, Barbra Streisand U (BSU), Robert Goulet U, Hawrelak U, McLuhan U, University of Marx and Lenin (Groucho and John, of course), Bob Clark's Kiddie Garten, Tyndall U.

For wildlife fans, such suggestions as Moose U and Goose U are sure to be forthcoming, not to mention I Gopher U or Al Oeming U.

Two strong opposing corporate and radical lobbies will in all probability be put into play if it becomes known the government is considering ESSO U and SDU.

However, the province is in a unique position to put itself on the good side of the Edmonton Transit System in the famous aeronautical events category. They could name the university after the bus run well-known by U of A students, the U2.

St. Albert sports fans would probably have no objections to Billy McGrand U or Jackie Parker U, but they might balk at a tip of the hat to the journalism world should the government decide on Wayne Overland Memorial U.

For those inveterate and oft obnoxious members of the punning fraternity, suggestions are again easy to come by: This will bend, fold, staple and mutilate U, Screw U, Censor U, Why Man? U, Clue U Inn, or Nix on U. How do those grab U?

Labor promoters will prefer One Big University (OBU) but Caviar U (CU) is a better possibility. Most of the people who will attend come from the upper socio-economic groups and their wishes will carry more weight.

Before the funniest suggestion of all, the government should seriously consider such names as Norman Bethune, Bertrand Russell, Chester Ronning, Roland Michener, Bob Edwards, Grant MacEwan, Louis Riel.

There is one name they could consider if they are interested in making themselves the laughing stock of the student body. It even outstrips The New Pathetic Bible Institute in the bad joke category.

They could call it Ernest Manning University. No, that is a little far-fetched. Why, even the initials, EMU have certain delectable qualities. The emu, an Australian bird that can't fly is one of the first to come to mind. No, an EMU by definition could never get off the ground.

Even if they tried Ernest C. Manning University (ECMU), it would immediately be labelled Early Christian Missionary's University.

Nah, they wouldn't do that.

What the government should do is make the choosing of a name a public matter. It should offer a prize for the winning entry to be judged by an independent committee. If it was good enough for a flag, it is good enough for the province's fourth university.

The university's role as name-caller in modern world and in ancient Egypt

The university has arrived once more at its annual season of name-calling. No one doubts, of course, that this is the role of the university in the modern world, and that cases of tenure, especially, should be aired publicly. A properly constituted democracy demands no less, not to speak of existential commitment. It is politically normal to take sides, and who would doubt that it is not emotionally satisfying? And to those who suppose that it is not the individual's right and duty to satisfy his emotions, it must be said that they are psychologically and intellectually retarded. Let no one remove my right to demand! This is what we all believe.

While meditating upon our happy state, I happened to recall a note I discovered once in the Bibliothèque Nationale. It suggested to me that, while my side is generally the right and sane one (which is the position to which we all liberally and reasonably give assent), it is very possible that my side is only temporal and subject to change. Perhaps it is rooted too much in what I want today, and not what someone else might want tomorrow. I pass on my brief note to you. Not much is known about it. It appears to be a transition of an ancient Egyptian anecdote made by some early modern traveller. Some scholars contend that it has none of the characteristics of an Egyptian anecdote. They prefer to assign it to some remoter period, and suggest that it may have been translated into Egyptian by an Egyptian traveller in Syria or possibly Persia. These, of course, are irrelevant squabbles. I leave their merit to historians and philosophers. I shall equally pass over in silence the literary merit of the anecdote. It is perhaps too circular to have any formal value. Its content, however, is stupendous, and it is very possible that it could form the basis of a poster campaign. Therefore, I turn it over to you.

On avait longuement discuté la chute des anciennes universités. Certains disaient que les pharaons étaient nés muets; certains disaient que les chercheurs cherchaient derrière les grandes fenêtres; certains disaient que les professeurs comblaient de mots l'air serein. D'autres enfin disaient que les étudiants étaient sûrs que le dieu du monde était confusion. Personne n'expliquait notre égypte invisible, on la décrit. De toute façon, on dit que les étudiants avaient bien pris l'habitude de combler le vide du monde d'un grand tas de mots et de silences. Depuis longtemps les pharaons sont devenus les morceaux de pierre; les chercheurs cherchent toujours. Les professeurs discutent à toute heure et les honoraires sont toujours raisonnables. Enfin les étudiants, composés de sons et de silences, poussés partout dans le monde, sont devenus aussi invisibles que notre égypte invisible.

Kick-line catastrophes in cafeteria as Votegetter wards off Huckster

By Charles Lunch

Steven J. Votegetter's campaign for students' union president hit a snag Tuesday when his kick line ran amuck in SUB Cafeteria.

Griselda and her dancing bears were brought in by Mr. Votegetter as a campaign novelty. Unfortunately the call for dancing bears has fallen off lately, and the bears had been underfed for about six months. The bears ate 1,200 cowering students before they attacked the cafeteria kitchen. All of them are presently recovering from their orgy and the inevitable ptomaine poisoning after their entry into the kitchen.

Mr. Votegetter said earlier today that he had decided to drop out of the race this year, because he was "sure that my campaign technique ate up half of my support." The physical education department verified this and said, "he's lucky they just got his support."

Mr. Votegetter was not the only candidate to suffer from kick-line errors this year.

Aloyus P. Huckster's kick-line also had trouble while performing in the cafeteria when one of his dancers accidentally kicked one of the diners in the stomach. When the poor chap brought up his lunch, the cafeteria was cleared in record time.

Mr. Huckster said he will have to spend his entire campaign fund cleaning up the cafeteria, and trying to recover the bodies of the lost kick-line artists.

In a previous performance of this same kick-line one of the dancer's shoes came off and broke Mr. Votegetter's campaign manager's jaw. A charge of sabotage is expected to be laid before the DIE Board soon.

J. W. Ward-Heeler, the campaign manager in question, said his hurts weren't serious. In fact he seemed quite at home with a shoe in his mouth.

The cafeteria seems to be jinxed when it comes to kick-lines, as Stansfield Whitewash's campaign supporters also hit a snag there. One of the members went into labor during lunch hour.

It was a sad day when the end product of her labors was mistaken for the cafeteria specialty of the day, spaghetti and meatballs. It was devoured instantly.

Mr. Whitewash is running on a birth control platform. He said he did not feel that the incident would hurt his campaign nearly as much as it hurt the kick-line member involved.

The only candidate who has had success with his kick-line so far this year is Pandoras Priam, who recruited the members of his organization from the 97th Street female students and teachers' committee. Though this kick-line has never been seen performing in public, it is rumored that they have done an excellent job of "hustling" the voters.

Women's liberation wants facilities to develop, not alienate, children

As a member of the Women's Liberation panel on last Wednesday's Women's Day program and as the mother of three children, I feel I should reply to the letter by Bill Klaus in last Friday's Gateway. He is correct in saying that "Children today are alienated . . ." and "the larger part of a child's personality is already developed by the time he is five." He is very incorrect when he claimed that the women's liberation movement wants children from birth to five years of age placed in nurseries "with 40 other kids looked after by a professional nurse for ten hours a day." Unfortunately Mr. Klaus, like many people who are either unaware of the variety of possible alternatives or are unwilling to consider them, can only accept an either/or solution.

Personal not impersonal facilities

Women's liberation does not want infants and children placed in impersonal, under-staffed institutions like nurseries. It does want good community pre-school and day care facilities available for all mothers. These should be small with approximately 20 children and four trained adults; and provide not only physical care but also an environment in which young children can develop their perceptive and cognitive skills, experience relating to other children and interested adults, and become aware that they are a member of a community which cares about and values them. These facilities should vary, some being geared to the needs of children of working mothers, others providing a supplement to the children's home experiences by having different classes which meet two and three times a week for about 2½ hours each time. These community located facilities could be co-operatives, with mothers and/or fathers participating along with the teachers, or they can provide for the parents and teachers to get together periodically to discuss the children's needs, experiences and development. There should also be daily after-school programs in sports, arts and crafts, music and dancing, etc., located within communities, which school-age children could participate in after school. A few presently exist, but not nearly enough!

Motherly care isn't enough

Now for some reasons why we need these kinds of facilities. First of all, for the children. Mothers alone cannot provide the variety of experiences which children need to develop their full potential (I don't mean that motherly care isn't important, it just isn't enough). Also, every home cannot provide a child oriented environment where the child is the centre of attention and where education at toys and games, books, musical instruments, and art supplies, animals, insects and growing things are available for each child to discover, manipulate, and experience under the guidance of trained, sensitive and caring adults.

Many mothers must work

As for the mothers, many mothers who work do so because they must, either to provide a reasonable standard of living for their families or because they are the only providers for their children. Presently a large number of mothers without husbands are forced to put up with the degrading experiences one suffers when on public welfare because they are not trained for adequately paying jobs. Consequently they cannot afford private facilities and many will not subject their children to under-staffed impersonal, institutions like public day care facilities. Other mothers want to use their skills and talents for the betterment of their society and themselves. These job experiences frequently increase their appreciation and enjoyment of their role as a mother.

Little communication home-school-community

Part of the alienation which children experience (and which Mr. Klaus referred to) develops as children experience more and more of their society and the world, through going to school, while their mother's perception grows smaller due to isolation within the home. There is little communication between the home, school and community. Growing children, especially adolescents, need mothers who can understand what they are experiencing. The woman whose total sense of identity is as "mother" cannot accept that her children will and should grow up and eventually leave the home, leaving her with many empty years ahead of her.

Motherhood for the community

In my opinion it is simply ignorant to say that the only good mother is the one who spends all day, every day, in the home tending to children. Motherhood also means the responsibility to participate, to help make the community, country, and world a fit place for all children to live and grow up in!

The Gateway as plaything from big daddy to junior, or how to battle censorship

This letter appears in what is supposed to be a student newspaper. But actually it should be clear that this is not a newspaper run for and by the students, but rather a plaything that students are allowed to have by big daddy. When Johnny starts using the toy in ways that daddy doesn't like, he is told how to use it. Not only told, but prevented from using it by daddy's helper in the print shop. The absurdity of allowing the manager of the print shop to determine what students can print in 'their paper' is staggering.

But the problem is that it is not staggering to most faculty or students, because censorship is such an integral part of their everyday lives, that they take it in stride. Perhaps it's just a minor absurdity compared with the Kemp situation and other things that occur in the marketplace of . . . (what goes in there?). The university as a managed and controlled mechanism has always been fairly well kept under wraps. But having the janitor, er, I mean, manager of the print shop do the dirty work is an indication either that the boys are slipping or, the more likely alternative, that there is nothing to worry about from the students. The student conception of free and open discussion of ideas seems to be so enemy that there is little to worry about. I think this assumption is, for the most part, correct. I write this letter with little hope that students will actually do anything about the situation.

What can be done? Many things. The Gateway staff could resign. This seems to me a more moral position to take than not to resign. For by not resigning you allow the charge of free and open discussion to continue. Not only that but everytime you do print something which seems a bit beyond the norms (whose norms huh?) you obscure the fact that you are not allowed to print what you want. And that is the fact. Or, you could leave blank spaces wherever anything is deleted and perhaps one way to ensure a lot of blank space is to continue to send the banned cartoon to be printed. You may want to add others until eventually The Gateway consists of six blank pages. I think the effect of seeing the white space eat up the printed space would be fun to watch. Or, you could use your imagination and come up with ways to fight a situation that must be fought if this newspaper is going to be of value. If you are timid about this matter then the credibility of anything published here must be suspect. Doesn't The Gateway become the house organ of the administration? That is, it prints what a certain segment of the administration (Tyndall for one), as represented by the manager of the print shop, allows it to print. The Gateway would be saying exactly what they don't want to hear but it won't be saying anything that they don't want to say. The net effect is that the newspaper is eliminated as a source of innovation and change. It is held to the morality of a past generation rather than being part of generating a new morality for this age. The Gateway will speak for the past like so many other things. We have enough of that.

Davis asks for return of Soc. papers: Promises no questions will be asked

I would appreciate space for an appeal. Just before Christmas I placed about 200 term papers on a chair outside my office door, Tory 5-29. They were gradually recovered by the students, the grades having been recorded. Most of the papers were written by students enrolled in Sociology 368, but a few were produced by graduate students in Sociology 531.

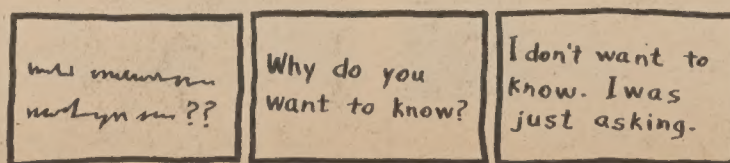

Unfortunately, about 15 papers were taken by someone other than the owner. Since all those had grades of either eight or nine, I can reasonably infer that they may have been "lifted" for future use in sociology courses. There is no loss of credit to the original authors, but my comments and criticisms on their work is kept from them. For the graduate students in particular, this is serious. I would like to appeal for the return of these papers to my office: no questions will be asked.

Suspensions force McDonald to make changes

Couves, Poon to get big chance in weekend play

By Bob Anderson

In with the new and out with the old.

That's the story as far as the hockey Golden Bears are concerned.

Bear coach Brian McDonald announced earlier this week that two regulars with the club this season are finished as a result of an incident on the train trip home from Winnipeg following last weekend's twin wins over the Manitoba entries in Western Canada Intercollegiate Hockey League action.

Winger Milt Hohol and centre Al Cameron were the guilty culprits and McDonald appears to have no qualms in handing out the suspensions.

"The two of them have been on probation as the result of an incident earlier in the season and knew exactly what the score was," he said. "And there's no way that either of them will be back this season."

No doubt the loss of the two will have some bearing on the

DAVE COUVES

... will play

HARVEY POON

team's chances of finishing first in the league. But for the sake of team morale, it was really the only move that the rookie mentor could make.

The club has three games left in the regular schedule and must win all three to hope to finish in top spot. Bears are currently tied with Calgary Dinosaurs each with 9-2 records, a scant two points ahead of Manitoba Bisons who are 8-3.

Bisons and Winnipeg Wesmen pay their first and only visit to Varsity Arena this weekend and McDonald will probably go with Harvey Poon and Dave Couves, both up from the Junior Bearcats as his replacements. Both have seen action with Bears in the past.

However, who will play where is still undecided.

Two line combinations will likely remain intact. This means that Bill Clarke will skate between Tom and Bob Devaney, while Gerry Hornby will centre Sam Belcourt and Jack Gibson.

The third trio will likely be made up of Couves, Oliver Morris and Don Falkenberg. Thus "Falkie" will be given the opportunity to play a regular shift as he has been used as a penalty killer for most of the season.

Either George Repka or Don Murray will be called up as an extra forward along with Poon.

Back on defence will be Mel Baird, replacing captain Gerry Braunberger who suffered a badly bruised knee in the Bears' 3-2 win over the Bisons last Saturday. Baird missed the Manitoba series because of a severe cold, but is ready to go. Dennis Zukiwsky, the rookie who has been impressive to date, will be Baird's partner while Mike Lemieux and Mike Ballash will form the other pairing.

McDonald will alternate his two goaltenders with Dale Halterman likely getting the call for Friday's game against Manitoba and Bob Wolfe playing against the Wesmen the following evening.

Alberta fans will get a good look at former Canadian National Herb Pinder now with the Bisons. The Saskatoon native has fired 15 goals thus far, good enough for second place in the individual scoring race.

Grant Clay, whose fine net-minding kept the score down to 4-0 on Saturday, will be in the nets for the Wesmen who are out of contention for a playoff spot.

Game time both nights is 8:30.

Dents spare no bowling mercy

Phys Ed entered only one man in the men's intramural bowl-off last weekend but he was good enough to walk off with the individual honors.

Dave Smolley ran up the highest triple of the tournament, a respectable 685, to take top spot.

Greg Miles of the Dekes nailed down second spot with a 675 triple.

Pharmacist Willy Wangert, Andy Barton of Arts and Science, and Zete Bob Cameron filled out the rest of the top five out of the 145 bowlers who participated.

The best single game bowled was by Dan Pether of the Phi Kaps who turned in a fine 302. International Student Peter Pope was second high with a 288.

When all the pins had been counted—taking the top ten individuals of each unit—the Faculty of Dentistry took the team title. Tallal Abougoush was the best Dent with a 627.

The Pharmacy contingent, led by Wangert, placed second with Phi Kappa Pi third.

Paul (Poopsie) Pomietlarz—rookie with a purpose

By Ron Ternoway

Very few people know that the hoop Bears have a hound called Poopsie on the team.

Poopsie is a dog with a difference, though. First, he towers 6'7". Second, he is a rare breed, a rockhound.

Actually Poopsie is just an easier way to say Paul Pomietlarz.

Paul, a second year geology major, started his basketball career in high school when he decided to "try out for all the teams." Under the watchful eye of former Eskimo Bill Mitchell he had an excellent stint at Ross Sheppard High. In his final year he was chosen as an All-City All-Star and also a Provincial All-Star as Ross Shep won the provincial title that year.

Last season he started with the big Bears but dropped down to the juniors.

"I couldn't get along with any of the guys on the Bears and it affected my play, so I went down to the Bearcats," he said.

After a slow start this year, Paul has been progressing rapidly since Christmas. In the last couple games he has cracked the starting lineup, a factor which he feels has helped to improve his play.

"I seem to concentrate more and get more involved in a game when I start," he said.

When he came to the Bears, Paul's major credential in addition to his size was his hook shot. He still has it, as anyone who watched Monday's game with the Wesmen can testify, but has been working hard with Coach Barry Mitchelson in developing a jump shot. As Mitchelson put it, "In high school Paul was three or four inches taller than everyone else and didn't need a jump shot. Now he needs it."

Mitchelson is pleased with Paul's overall progress. Paul's attitude has definitely improved, and he is learning to use his size as an asset," he said.

Pomietlarz is a fierce and intensive competitor, a fact which has led to some foul difficulties in the last few games.

"Things usually start out all right. I may get one or two fouls in the first half, but then Mitch (coach Mitchelson) gets us all worked up with his half-time talk and I go out and play just a little too aggressively," he says.

Although faced with the prospect of an excellent rookie year, Paul is uncertain about his basketball future.

"The way I see it, I'm now playing with the best. The only place to go from here is to the best of the best, and I'm not sure whether or not I have the time or talent to do that. So I might not be back next year."

But Mitchelson has different ideas. "If he continues to progress at his present rate, by the end of next season he will be the best centre in Western Canada," he said.

So who's right?

On the road

Poopsie and the rest of the Bruins are on the road this weekend as the Western Canada Intercollegiate Basketball League schedule moves into its last two weeks. With a record of 7-5, Mitchelson's crew has all but clinched a playoff spot. Friday the Bears are in Regina for a game with the lowly Cougars, who have won only two games in 13 starts. Saskatoon beckons Saturday night as the Bruins tangle with the Huskies. Although led by the league's top scorer, Tom Gosse, Huskies have managed only four wins in their 13 league encounters.

The following weekend the Golden Ones wrap up their WCIBL schedule with games against Calgary and Lethbridge. Then, in all likelihood, it's off to Winnipeg on Feb. 21 for the semi-final series with the always tough Bisons.

Golden Bear wrestler to stage meet

The University of Alberta Golden Bear wrestling team, fresh from a victory in their invitational meet last weekend, will host the Junior College Meet Friday and Saturday.

Wrestlers from numerous points across the province will compete in the meet that is being held in conjunction with Varsity Guest Weekend at the university. More than 15,000 high school students from across Alberta are expected to visit the University of Alberta over the weekend.

Matches begin at 8 p.m. Friday in the West Gymnasium, Physical Education Building. Matches Saturday are scheduled for 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. also in the West Gymnasium.

Teams from the Northern and Southern Alberta Institutes of Technology, the Red Deer, Camrose and Grande Prairie Junior Colleges, Mount Royal College in Calgary, the Olds School of Agriculture, amateur athletic associations, and a high school all-star team from Edmonton along with the hosting Golden Bears, will compete.

Competitors will wrestle ten weight classifications. Following this meet, the Western Canadian Intercollegiate Athletic Association Championships will be held at the University of Saskatchewan, Saskatoon, Feb. 13 and 14.

The Canadian Intercollegiate Athletic Union Championships will be held at the University of Alberta, Feb. 27 and 28.

Volleyball action

Meanwhile, all day Saturday in the Main Gym, the Alberta Open Volleyball Tournament is slated to be run off. Twenty men's and 14 women's teams are expected to compete, with the Alberta Provincial Championship on the line in each section. The tourney runs from 9 in the morning to 6:30 in the evening.

Doctors prevail in intramural basketball

Medicine has done it again.

The boys in white added yet another title to their collection last week by capturing the intramural basketball crown, Division I style.

Superior hustle and rebounding skill took care of the Phi Delt by a 37-22 score in semi-final action, while the same qualities were responsible for the 39-29 finish in the final against LDS.

The LDS'ers stayed right with the Meds in the first half and the teams left the court tied 23-23. But a strong performance in the second half salted the game away for Medicine.

Frank Sutton dropped 26 points for the champions, in the two games, while Tim Lavens was good for 24.

To make it into the finals, LDS handily defeated the Dents 58-26 and Law 44-21. Cam Burn with 26 and George Schow with 25 led the way.

In Division II, it was an all-

Physical Education final with the "C" team upsetting their "B" counterparts 17-16 in the final game.

Semi-finals

The winners got by Medicine "C" and Delta Sigma "B" in semi-final play, while the losers made it to the final by defeating Medicine "B" 37-31. Ken Gamburg led the champs with 41 points.

Weins leads

Division III laurels went to Erwin Wiens and his Education "E" crew. The teachers trounced Medicine "E" 37-6 in the preliminary contest, and in the final won out over Medicine "D" 31-27. Wiens was the top point-getter for Education with 34 points.

WCIAA track and field championships set to go

The University of Alberta Golden Bear track and field team will host the Western Canadian Intercollegiate Athletic Association Indoor Track and Field Championships this Saturday.

This championship meet, to be held in the Kinsmen Field House at Walderdale Park, will be one of the athletic highlights of Varsity Guest Weekend at the university. Up to 15,000 high school students from across the province are expected to visit the campus and Edmonton during that weekend.

It marks the first time ever that the University of Alberta has acted as host to the WCIAA Championships.

More than 200 athletes from the Universities of Manitoba, Winnipeg, Saskatchewan, both Saskatoon and Regina campuses, Calgary, British Columbia, Victoria, and Alberta are expected to compete in both running and field events.

Competition begins at 1 p.m. and all preliminary events will be run off throughout the afternoon. Finals in each event are planned for an evening meeting which begins at 7:30 p.m.

The University of Alberta's team finished fourth in the championship last season, but coach Geoff Watson, a graduate student in the Faculty of Physical Education, is hopeful his team can move up in the standings this year.

"The University of Saskatchewan and UBC have outstanding teams and are favored to finish near the top. Our athletes have been training since September and we're hopeful that with improved individual standings we can rise in the team standings," Coach Watson said.

Some of the Bear competitors who are expected to do well in the meet include: Liz Vanderstam, who placed well in the high jump, long jump, and 300 metres in recent meets in Calgary and Saskatoon; Bruce Lange, a freshman, who runs the 500 metres; Dale Knudson in the 800-yard run and Brian Stackhouse in the two-mile run.

Coach Watson says some of Canada's best track and field athletes with other teams will also be attending the meet.

Standard rising

"Our college standard in Canada is climbing every year and it's now reached the point where at some of the individual meets we have Canadian contestants who are beating some of the top athletes from the United States." He cited an example in which Rick Bell of the University of Saskatchewan defeated highly-rated Kirk Clayton of the United States in the 300 metres at the Calgary meet.

Prior to the meet, coaches from the various universities will meet at the Field House with Lionel Pugh, UBC, who has been selected as coach of Canada's National team which will compete in the Commonwealth Games, Edinburgh, Scotland, during the summer, and Jim Daly, coach of the University of Manitoba team.

The University of Manitoba will host the Canadian Intercollegiate Athletic Union Indoor Championships, Feb. 14 and 15 and top competitors from five conferences across Canada will be entered in this two-day meet.

When Pierre graduated with his B.A. from Jean de Brebeuf College in 1940, he was a confused young man like most of you. He had great ambitions. American Empire persuaded him to further his education. He received his law degree at Universite de Montreal and was called to the bar in 1943. But Pierre, like most young men had an interest in why things are the way they are, so we obliged him. He came down to Harvard where he received his M.A. in political economy in 1945. But he was on to even better things: Ecole de Sciences Politiques in Paris and London School of Economics. We could see he was a young man with promise.

He was a young man out to change things, clear away the musty cobwebs. When he joined the Privy Council in 1949 as an economist and political advisor, we knew we had a real mover on our hands. When he challenged the conservative and crusty regime of Maurice Duplessis in Cite Libre, we knew he was our man.

We like our clients to be happy. Our young men are working hard at changing conditions. Pierre showed he had the drive, the intelligence and the charm to do the job so we made him our chief agent in Canada, the position he now holds.

You want an interesting job, right. A job that will help you plug into the mainstream of North American life and yet be a master in your own house. If you want to swing, but want security, try us. We'll be recruiting on the U of A campus on February 9 and 10.

VGW '70

THE UNIVERSITY OF ALBERTA, EDMONTON, CANADA

FEBRUARY 5, 6, 7 & 8, 1970

Only the toughest need apply!

by SUE RENNEBOHM

Despite the vast amount of publicity that has always surrounded Varsity Guest Weekend, there is one feature which is rarely mentioned—the Ernest Sincere Trophy. Perhaps it is seldom mentioned because it has never been won. The award was established the first year of VGW by Ernie Sincere, the first man to ever qualify, but his feat has never been duplicated since. Ernie managed to attend every event, see every display of VGW that year.

We feel the time is ripe, considering the superior talents and abilities of the current generation, for the trophy to be awarded again. Consequently, as a special aid, we have set up a program by which a contestant could indeed qualify. The weekend starts off slowly with only the Carnival Thursday afternoon. Any individual in halfway decent physical shape should be able to complete all 27 events. Not only that, the hours between 5 and 8 p.m. are free for recuperation purposes. At 8, we suggest you start the program off with the first act of Mame, toddle down the hall for the second half of the "Canadian Identity" forum, whiz upstairs for the third performance of the group at the Room at the Top and then scoot across the street to catch the last half hour of the Residence Dance. Then get some rest.

Friday—more action. Enter the first round of the pancake eating contest, and fill up. It may be your last meal for a while. You are needed immediately afterward for the Carnival events. Disregard the syrup dripping off your chin, nose, eyes and fingers and the butter some idiot smeared in your hair. If you're not self conscious nobody will notice. The university seminars start at 2 p.m. and the Carnival does not end till five. In order to remain eligible for the trophy you will have to commute between the two events. And for heaven sakes stop worrying about that syrup and butter. You will have time to get cleaned up between 5 and 8. Later you can catch the second act of Mame and parts of the other events.

Well thats a start for you. We won't outline the entire program because part of the contest is a test of the imagination and organizational abilities of the contestants. Good Luck! and don't miss the pickled babies. For those of you who choose not to enter competition, we want you to know that this is not what university is all about. We have tried to give you a glimpse of the university through Varsity Guest Weekend and an even smaller glimpse through this supplement. We have tried tell you about some of the projects the students are organizing for themselves, such as the SUB expansion, a slant on some of the interests the students have in Canadian society in general, a radical viewpoint, an establishment viewpoint, a message from the administration, an illustration that university is not all work or all social life. For prospective students, parents, of the students and taxpayers, we have tried to show through VGW what university is all about and in the attempt, we ourselves have found some answers.

Is the university failing society?

Varsity Guest Weekend is here to give you a taste of campus life. But only a taste.

What you will be seeing is simply a part of the university—the displays, the teach-in, the social events. The other parts can't possibly be experienced in such a brief time.

Many of you will be expecting different things. Some might be interested in the labs because they want to be a scientist or physician. Some might be interested in talking to the admissions people because they fear having problems with admission. Some might want to get a feel for the social life of the campus so that when they get here they will be in the groove. Some might be curious. Some might be dragged here by determined friends or parents.

You will see all sorts of people. You will see students, alumni, and parents trying to impress their followers with the vast store of knowledge they have about the university. You will see some young visitors, some not so young, sitting around the lounges or cafeterias trying cunningly to hustle a member of the opposite sex. You will see harried workers trying valiantly to keep up with the demand for services. You will see lost and bewildered people. You will see tourist-type visitors who check off everything they see so that they can say they saw it. And you will see keeners who willingly walk themselves into the ground.

But some people won't be expecting anything. And some people you won't even see.

I am not talking about the many thousand university students and staff who have fled the campus during VGW, I am talking of the many Canadians in this province and in every province in Canada who will never expect a post-secondary education and might never touch foot on a university campus.

You will not hear much of this problem—the problem of accessibility.

University should be democratic . . .

And you won't hear much about other problems that are close to home. Like the problem of the use of knowledge, the problem of the quality of what is taught and how it is learned, the problem of the unemployment and underemployment of those who graduate, the problem of our socially biased admission tests (departmental), and the problem of making the university a democratic institution.

Many of us feel that the university reflects the weaknesses and therefore the problems of our society. We do not have equality of accessibility to the university because we do not have equality of opportunity in our society. Even a quick look will reveal many of the societal maladies reflected in the university.

The university, our own U of A included, is an institution of the socio-economic elite. Its students are generally from the wealthier and more powerful levels of society. Students who are not from this group and who manage to make it to university do so in spite of our system which favors the sons and daughters of the elite.

The university trains the men and women who become part of the elite of society themselves. They will be the professionals, the senior civil servants, the academics, and the corporate executives. The university is tied in directly by professional associations, and curricula which are designed to fit students into particular positions like medicine or commerce. Even some of the traditional cornerstone faculties of the university, arts and science, are tending towards this. The effect is that the university acts as a certifier of students for the roles they will fill in the society. A degree becomes the good housekeeping seal of approval. Examinations and papers become market reports.

The examinations which are used to weed out those who are fit to come to the university are by no means "objective" in how and what they evaluate. Witness the case of the native people. One could literally count on the fingers of one hand the number of treaty Indians who have actually graduated from a university in Alberta.

The research done at universities and the knowledge that is accumulated are equally supportive of the social elite. One would be hard pressed to find research that was being done directly for the poor, or for unions, or for small businessmen. It is easy to find research being done for large corporations, or for the government. Even government research about the poor is generally of limited value for the people they are supposed to help. It very often results in more clever ways to alleviate the symptoms of problems and not expose the causes of these problems.

But now students are beginning to question this kind of university. Many of them, in particular, arts and science students, are finding it increasingly difficult to get good jobs even after their training. In applied sciences such as engineering the jobs are also getting scarcer. In many cases, if a Canadian graduate wishes a good job in the research and development field he will have to seriously consider going south to the U.S. where most of the large companies have their research and development concentrated. Women are really hit hard. There are a good many women who after a considerable amount of expensive training are finding themselves in secretarial or technical jobs. So even as a trainer for jobs the university is in difficulty.

The university is supposed to have a role as an agency for education in its best sense, in the sense of a free creative and critical search for truth, for knowledge. But very few university students actually get this opportunity. Arts is supposed to be the fortress of this kind of education, yet we find that most students there face examinations, didactic lecture teaching, and the same kinds of situation where disciplines do not always make clear their underlying assumptions.

The tragedy of the whole situation is that there is a terrible waste of human resources taking place. On one hand, there are many students who wish a significant education in the best sense so that they can have a meaningful and stimulating job and make a valuable contribution to the society; there is a resource. On the other hand, there are a great many obvious problems to solve such as poverty, pollution, the provision of a system of health care, housing, education, the development of industry; there is a need. Somehow, there seems to be no rational connection between the resource and need.

The University of Alberta belongs to you and to the many other people living in Alberta. Its direction can be affected by you, especially those of you who decide to participate in it as students. Like many institutions in our society your university is faced with some very serious and fundamental problems.

I see it as our role, the role of the university and all those concerned with it, to face these problems squarely and act.

V.G.W. dangerous! a word of caution

Ron Pearson

It is my pleasure on behalf of the Varsity Guest Weekend Committee, to welcome you to the University of Alberta. The purpose of Varsity Guest Weekend is to provide a means for the public to gain an insight into university life. We are throwing open the doors of the university with the hope that the activities we have arranged will prove to be an enjoyable and profitable experience to you.

The major project of VGW this year is the Canada Teach-In. Three panels have been set up under topics relevant to contemporary Canadian problems. On Thursday night top panelists, i.e., Marcel Lambert, Laurier Lapierre and Cy Gonic, will discuss the problem of Canadian identity in the Dinwoodie Lounge of SUB. On Friday the discussion will concern Canada's role in international affairs and feature such speakers as Paul Martin, Dalton Camp, Chester Ronning and Andrew Brewin. On Saturday night the teach-in will move over to Lister Hall where the topic will be Canadian Federalism. Panelists include Donald Smiley, Mark McGuigan and Marcel Lambert. It is our hope that these panels will be extremely worthwhile and stimulate much useful discussion. I strongly urge everyone to make the effort to attend at least one of them.

One of the major purposes of the weekend is to give prospective university students a chance to learn more about the community into which they plan to enter. The university seminars to be held in SUB Theatre on Friday afternoon and all day Saturday have been set up with this purpose in mind. Topics will centre around such subjects as student loans and housing and academic reform. Consult the schedule for these seminars and attend the ones in which you are most interested.

The Academic Information Centre will be set up in Rutherford Library on Saturday. Student and faculty representatives from all faculties will be on hand to distribute material on courses and entrance requirements and to answer any questions which you may have.

There will be displays set up in most of the buildings on Saturday. A display schedule is printed at the back of the information booklet.

The social side of the weekend has not been ignored. The Guess Who will play in concert in the Jubilee Auditorium on Friday night. Tickets may be purchased at the SUB Information Desk, Mike's or at the door. This is Canada's top band and has been widely acclaimed as one of the most talented groups in North America. Make a point of attending, for it is unlikely that you will get a chance to hear a quality rock group in surroundings comparable to the Jubilee Auditorium at comparable prices again. Quite a change from the Sales Pavilion or the Gardens! On Thursday there will be a dance in Lister Hall with the Key and on Saturday there will be a big windup double bandstand featuring the Happy Feeling and Everyman's Tonto in Dinwoodie. The Room at the Top will feature top folk entertainment from 8-12 every night and on Saturday afternoon. The Winter Carnival events will be held every day and will be highlighted by a pancake breakfast on Friday morning and an all night curling bonspiel on Thursday night. To round out the action, the Jubilaires will present their production of "Mame!" in the SUB Theatre every night and the Golden Bears hockey team plays in the ice arena on Friday and Saturday nights.

A word of caution: there are many events running concurrently throughout the weekend. Try to attend as diverse a selection as you can. Don't spend all your time at purely social or purely academic events or you will miss out on many aspects of the weekend.

Thanks for coming and I hope your visit will be an enjoyable one.

U of A Greetings

Dr. Max Wyman

It is a pleasure to extend greetings to the many visitors to the campus of the University of Alberta connected with Varsity Guest Weekend 1970. Ever since its inception in 1953 the major objective of Varsity Guest Weekend was to give prospective university students from the high schools of Alberta a glimpse of university life. Although this objective will be continued into the 1970's, I feel certain another major objective to be accomplished by Varsity Guest Weekend will emerge during the next few years.

From the ever-increasing number of people seeking entrance into post-secondary educational programs, it is becoming clear that the people of Alberta, in the 18-24 year age group, are aware of the importance of post-secondary education in general, and of a university education in particular. During the 1970's, I expect that many people who have completed post-secondary programs will find it necessary to return to a university, or to some other educational institution, and enter some form of continuing education program. It is my hope that Varsity Guest Weekend will give to such people some insight into the obsolescent nature of their education, and the need for continuing programs of education throughout a lifetime.

The year of 1970 marks the beginning of a new decade and will change in many different ways. One change which should be made is to bring the university and the community closer together than ever before. A successful Varsity Guest Weekend is one small way such a change can take place.

It is the hope of the university that Varsity Guest Weekend will induce many people to come to the university for the first time, and also induce many people to return to the university for further education.

M. Wyman
president

University critical servant of the community

By TIM CHRISTIAN
Chairman, S.C.M.

During Varsity Guest Weekend it is particularly relevant to raise the long controversial question "what position should the University as an institution occupy in relation to the broader community?" Dr. Ken Strand, the president of Simon Fraser University has taken what he calls a "classical liberal position" on this question. In a paper delivered to a group of Vancouver businessmen in October of this year, Strand stated his position as follows, "the University should remain neutral on social questions of our time."

There are two levels on which I disagree with Strand's view:

(1) In the first place, it is a mistake to assume that the university as it presently exists is neutral. An institution which operates apologetically on the underlying assumptions of our society, to the definite advantage of the relatively small, affluent, controlling groups, thus denying the real needs of the larger community, the university contributes to the development of the "social questions" to which Strand alludes.

Several qualities of the university contribute to the perpetuation of the economic and power disparities in our society. As the education system is presently constituted, children of upper middle class families have a much greater chance of obtaining a post-secondary education than do lower class children. A survey conducted by the C.U.S. in 1965 substantiates this point. An examination of the socio-economic backgrounds of a randomly selected sample showed that 25% of the students tested came from families whose income was greater than $10,000 per annum. Only 6.1% of Canadian income earners are in this category. On the other hand, 28% of the students tested were from families whose annual income was less than $5,000—54.1% of Canadian wage earners fall into this income bracket. In other words, the children of upper income families have about eight times more likelihood of attending university than do the children of low income families. The situation is even more desperate for Native People.

Thus by training the children of the already affluent and powerful in our society, for future positions of responsibility, power and status, the university serves as an active agent in the preservation of the status quo.

Although the access to post-secondary education is not universal, and hence the benefits are not shared equally; through government subsidization, everyone is forced to share the expense. University financing is thus clearly an example of the subsidization of the rich by the poor.

University promotes status quo . . . ?

In our highly technological society, the university serves the specific interests of the power holding minority in several other ways:

- it provides a source of trained technicians to complement the productive process.
- the university acts as a socialization centre in which students, through their curricula, are inculcated with the predominant values of society. No attempt is made in an economic class, for example, to determine if capitalism is the most just economic system or if it is capable of making the most beneficial contribution to the community's welfare.
- social scientists conduct apologetic studies on social problems. They regard phenomena such as poverty, racism, inequality before the law, and pollution as independent problems to be solved by separate solutions within the context of the existing social framework. By failing to recognize that these problems are not independent from existing social relationships, but are rather, interrelated, intrinsic functions of these relationships, social scientists mystify issues and ensure that these problems will not be attributed to their real causes. Problems such as those mentioned above will not be resolved until these social relationships, which are manifestations of the existing economic system, are fundamentally changed.

(2) I am in complete disagreement with the intent of Strand's statement, that members of the University community should remain neutral on social issues. If anything, it would seem that the members of the University, because they have obtained unique and special abilities, have a substantial obligation to mobilize their skills and the resources of the university for the benefit of the entire community.

This demand that the university community take stands on social issues need not, however, be based only on an assertion of its moral and ethical obligations to society. For, in this age of problems so complex and interrelated that they affect all of us (pollution, poverty, racism for example) it is a matter of self-interest, of self-preservation, that each person take an active stance in relation to "social questions of our time."

Students promote change?

The nature of the university's involvement in the affairs of the community must be revised. Rather than carrying out research for corporations and foundations, the university should undertake research relevant to the entire community—for farmers' organizations, tenants' associations and labour unions, for example. Rather than simply reflecting the predominant values of society, the university should be acting as a critical servant of the community, examining the validity of the assumptions upon which the social system is based.

VGW SUPPLEMENT 1970

EDITORS: PAT CAMPBELL
SUSAN RENNEBOHM

Amazingly enough, we present to you the 1970 issue of the Varsity Guest Weekend supplement on time. Certainly in the building stages, with many mistakes by your very inexperienced editors, missed copy deadlines, and financial panic, the final outcome was never guaranteed. But, with ample assistance from the Gateway staff, in particular, the tremendous effort of Jim Carter, Gateway's Forum Five editor, we pulled it off!

We wish to thank, on behalf of the VGW Committee, all those who contributed time, effort and copy: Bill Avison, Forrest Bard, Derek Bulmer, Sue Edwards, Cheryl Gawlicki, David Hebditch, Ken Hutchinson, Glenn Johanson, David Leadbeater, Clark Lyndsay, Suzanne McLellan, Don Mackenzie, Vera Radio, Laura Scott, Percy Wickman, Dr. Wyman, and the Students' Union office staff. Pictures taken this year and last, were due to Marie Stephenson, Al Yackalic, Theo Bruseker, Steve Makris, and Dave Hebditch.

The VGW supplement is published by the Varsity Guest Weekend Committee. The editors are responsible for all material published herein.

University Orientation — crash course

Of the various academic events during VGW this year, the University Seminars are designed to enlighten students, prospective students, and the general public, on issues and situations pertinent to The University of Alberta Campus. The five seminars, which are organized by the Interfraternity Council will be held on Friday, February 6 and Saturday, February 7 in SUB theatre.

The first seminar, at twelve noon Friday, will be a Students' Council "Hotseat". Here Students' Council executive and councillors will offer their opinions and answer your questions on the "campus situation". The Hotseat, the third to be held this academic year, has often proved to be the battleground of much heated debate concerning campus politics.

The second seminar, at 2:30 p.m. Friday, will focus on the subject: "general student involvement on the national and international levels: can they change society?" The panel, which will consist of persons associated with the various fields of student involvement, should spark interesting comment and debate on whether or not students are really accomplishing anything.

Saturday, seminars begin at 10:30 a.m. with a panel of University personnel giving information concerning services provided for the student by the University. This seminar, which will be of great value to the prospective student and his parents, will deal with what services are available in the fields of health, housing, financial assistance, etc. There is also room for discussion on what improvements should be made in these fields.

At 12:30 Saturday, the topic turns to student participation in extra-curricular activities on campus. The panel will consist mainly of students already involved in various activities. They will discuss the merits and demerits of taking part in students' union activities, joining a club, taking part in athletics, or joining a fraternity. They will answer such questions as how much time can you, as a university student, spend on extracurricular and social events and still maintain a respectable academic average.

Finally, at 2:30 Saturday afternoon, the topic of Academic Reform will be discussed. What changes are needed in secondary and post-secondary curriculums in order to give the student a more complete education? How is the Worth Commission on academic reform involved? These and other questions will be of great interest and importance to both the parent and student, as are the topics of the other seminars. You are urged to attend as many of these discussions as possible, in order to enlighten yourself on the University of Alberta campus situation.

V.G.W. sponsors contest

The Winter Carnival consists of snowshoe races, human dogsled races, a broomball tournament, ice skating obstacle races, a pancake eating contest and an ice statue contest. Many of the high schools in the city field teams in each of the events, providing stiff competition for the university clubs' teams. Every event, except the pancake eating contest, requires a six-member team. There is a men's grand aggregate trophy and a women's grand aggregate trophy offered to the club gaining the most number of points in all the events.

J. Dorsal finishes second!

Pancake eating contest	9:30-10:30 a.m.
Broomball	10 a.m. until completed
Snowshoe races	12-1:30 p.m.
Human dogsled races	1:30-3 p.m.
Ice skating obstacle races	4-4:30 p.m.

All the events will be held on the Quad (the area between SUB and the Chemistry building) on Friday, February 6th. The snowshoe races are run as a relay with an exchange of the snowshoes at the end of each lap. The snowshoes are supplied by the committee and the winners are usually the team that masters the art of forward locomotion in the snowshoes before the race ends. In the human dogsled races, the team of "dogs" must pull a toboggan with one rider around a prescribed course.

Last Year's Champion broomball player

Winter Carnival Refreshments.
Hot cider on the Quad.

The rider may not leave the toboggan until it crosses the line and the team must not receive any assistance from bystanders. Each team supplies its own toboggan, in whatever doctored form they desire. The ice skating obstacle race is another difficult event. The six man team is given a 20 foot length of rope, on to which all six people must hang as they skate around the various obstacles. Time penalties are imposed if any member of the team loses grip of the rope during the trial. The pancake eating contest permits only one entry per organization, preferably the one with the strongest stomach. The contestants must consume a certain number of pancakes, the winner being the one who consumes them in the shortest time. In the event of a tie, a second trial will be run immediately.

The broomball tournament begins Friday morning and will continue until finished, or as long as the competitors last. The finals will be held Saturday morning.

As well as the events run Friday, the last event contributing points toward the trophy is the ice statue contest. The statues are built along 89th Avenue, using any theme the contestants desire, in humorous, artistic or dramatic categories.

Sub on the move

Although the present SUB has been operating for only three years it is already inadequate to meet student needs. This fall the Government of the Province announced that the University of Alberta would have a ceiling of 25,000 students. The Registrar's Office predicts this ceiling will be reached by 1973. However, six years ago university officials expected a maximum of only 18,000, not to be reached before 1980. These figures were the guidelines utilized by the Planning Commission for the present SUB. This bulging enrollment has led to a re-evaluation of the entire structure and student needs by the SUB Expansion Commission, established by Students' Council in 1969.

The first task of this commission was to take stock of the assets and liabilities of the present structure. A use survey revealed that over 6,000 people use the food facilities and over 20,000 transactions are made per day in the present structure. Rooms, especially the theatre, are booked weeks in advance and lounge space is overflowing.

The second task of the Commission was to investigate the economic and physical feasibility of increasing the size of the present structure. After establishing the balance required to provide the best combination of services, the Commission documented a program including their recommendations of changes required. This included a statement of which areas should be expanded or redesigned and what new facilities would best complement those already present on the recommendation of the Commission. Students' Council appointed Mr. H. S. Richards as Prime Consultants to prepare schematic drawings and P. S. Ross and Partners as financial consultants.

In conjunction with Mr. Richards, the Commission has prepared an expansion proposal which would require an increase of Students' Union fees of $3.00, it is anticipated that a regular licensed liquor facility with food service to accommodate 400 persons. The PUB in SUB would help finance the expansion but would require an amendment in the Universities Act. A community service area would provide specialty shops which cater to the needs of students and lease revenue would supplement income required for building. However, the prime need is for more student space for lounging and eating. This would be provided by more lounges including the enclosure of the courtyard and a snack and sack eating area. Other facilities include meeting rooms, auditorium, photo directorate, Gateway, and council chambers.

The expansion would extend south of the present structure across 89 Avenue to provide 85,000 square feet of space. Its plan is closely associated with the Diamond and Myer Long Range Plan for the university as it will incorporate a pedestrian mall to link the Physical Education Building and the new parking structure.

It's Mame

So Varsity Guest Weekend rolls by again, and that means it's time again for the Jubilaires. And this year, the veteran campus musical theatre group has chosen one of the biggest Broadway hits of recent years, "Mame!" as its feature presentation of Varsity Guest Weekend.

The Jubilaires will premiere the show Thursday through Sunday of VGW in the SUB Theatre (at 8:15 every night except Sunday, when the curtain goes up at 7:30), and if you can't catch it this weekend, don't miss it next weekend, Friday or Saturday.

The purpose of VGW is to illustrate to you, the public, the various activities and concerns which occupy the students on this campus. The Jubilaires is the only extra-curricular theatre group at the U of A, and one of the biggest musical groups, second only to the Mixed Chorus. Their annual production for VGW showcases more campus talent in more areas than any other event possibly could. It involves a singing, acting, and dancing cast of 40 people, an orchestra of 25, a total backstage crew of between 60 and 80 people—all pooling their particular talents to the total effect—"Mame!"

So if you're in town or on campus for Varsity Guest Weekend, don't miss the Jubilaires production of "Mame!" Hurry down to their box office in SUB and pick up your tickets right now.

Kerry Hughes leads great cast

and the Jubilaires love it.

For VGW '70, the Jubilaires have got the best of all shows, Gerry Herman's "Mame!", and in the title role, they have one of the most versatile actresses in Edmonton musical theatre, Kerry Hughes.

Originally from Vancouver, Miss Hughes has lived now in Edmonton for four years. In that time she has done eight musicals, six for Civic Musical Theatre and two with the Jubilaires. Her first starring role was as Rosemary Pilkington in Civic's last and most memorable production, "How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying." Then, just last fall, she took on one of the most demanding roles in musical theatre, that of Evie-Anyah-Ilse-Ginnie in Anthony Newley's "Stop the World—I want to Get Off." The part required to play four different women in four different accents, none of which was her own. Miss Hughes' forte is dance and comic action, and she gets plenty of both in "Mame!"

Starring opposite her as the aging actress Vera Charles, is the veteran Jubilaire, Janey Craig, who did her first Jubilaires show as Daisy Mae in the feature presentation of VGW '66, "Li'l Abner!" Since then, she has appeared in or worked on six more Jubilaires shows, most recently starring as Jane in "Stop the World . . ."

The younger Patrick Dennis is played by 13-year-old Lawrence Day. Lawrence is not only an award-winning singer, but a fine dancer and actor as well. His nanny Gooch is played by another veteran in musical theatre and Jubilaires, Sue Polsky. She has appeared in many shows with Miss Hughes as a member of Civic Musical Theatre, and she brings to the part of Gooch a beautiful voice and comic talent.

As Beauregard Burnside, Richard Davison takes his first role in a musical comedy, but he is no stranger to theatre, having worked often in Children's Theatre and at Walterdale. The supporting cast includes George Belcher, Roger Burrows and Blain Gowing.

All are under the expert direction of John Rivet, a drama teacher and a man well known in Edmonton theatre for his acting and directing talent with Walterdale Playhouse. His most recent work was as director of the 1969 K-Days melodrama "Dead-Eye Dick."

In charge of the large singing and dancing chorus for "Mame!" are veteran Jubilaires Michael Klazek as musical director and Larry Dill and Howie Wayne as choreographers. Mr. Dill choreographed last year's VGW presentation, "Girl Crazy" while Mr. Wayne's last appearance was in the cast of "Stop the World . . ." Mr. Klazek, who also will conduct the largest orchestra ever seen in Edmonton for musical theatre, was musical director for "Stop the World . . ." and has worked on five other Jubilaires shows.

Together, all these people have worked hard to give you one of the most momentous experiences in recent years.

Auntie Mame wows 'em in sub theatre

One of the most lovable, eccentric characters ever to hit the stage—that's Auntie Mame. And this VGW is your chance to see her, in the Edmonton premiere of the Broadway hit musical "Mame!", presented by the Jubilaires every night in SUB.

What's "Mame!" all about? Well, it tells the story of little Patrick Dennis, searching with his nanny, Agnes Gooch, for his only living relative, his Auntie Mame. The time is 1928, prohibition, and the place is New York City.

After wandering lost and desperate for several hours in the big city, Patrick and Agnes finally locate Mame's Beekman Place apartment. And then the fun begins, 'cause they stumble wide-eyed into one of her gigantic bathtub gin bashes. There is Mame, blowing her bugle to raise the roof, and there are all her incredible friends—Vera, the aging musical revue actress; Ralph Devine, who runs a nature (?) school for kids; Lindsay Woolsey, who wants to be serious when all Mame wants is a good time. There's Ilto, Mame's crafty Japanese butler, and a Lithuanian Bishop. Mame welcomes Patrick and Agnes into her crowd with open arms, and that is where trouble begins.

Patrick's trustee, an English bore named Babcock, wants Patrick to attend the best boarding school in New York. Mame wants only for her nephew to learn in the school of life, to "Open a New Window" every day. And that is exactly how Patrick grows up.

Mame's life soon begins to complicate even more. The crash comes, the depression is on, and Mame is destitute. She tries to find work, and seems hopelessly inept at all she tries. But she is saved by the ultimate in Southern gentlemen, Mr. Beauregard Jackson Pickett Burnside. Patrick, meanwhile, grows up and falls in love—with a girl that Mame can't stomach. How she tries to make Patrick see the light makes for a riotous last few scenes.

Mame is a hilarious character, and "Mame!" is a hilarious show. Its various little subplots, such as the liberation of Agnes Gooch or the downfall of Ralph Devine, are what makes the story the classic it is. When you add the fantastic musical production numbers which make this show a masterpiece in musical theatre, you have an evening which no one can afford to miss.
